PROJECT SUMMARY

EN_REACH-ED is a research project that aims at providing a school readiness triad, including a pre-school parenting and teacher readiness program, designed to increase parental and teacher capacity in improving school readiness among pre-school children in Bangladesh, Nepal, and Tanzania.

In Tanzania, the study focuses on the readiness of both children and caregivers to enter the preschool education program, through an initiative called Every Newborn-Reach Up Early Education Intervention for All Children (EN-REACH). This new project will support the adaptation of the EN-REACH program to incorporate key components on teacher readiness to facilitate easy transition to pre-primary education (EN-REACH ED). This study focuses on examining accessibility, equity, and quality of education among learners with and without disabilities across primary schools. This one-year project will generate evidence to inform national educational planning and policies that support inclusive and equitable learning environments, particularly for learners with special needs.
